A LETTER FROM THE STUDIO

I'd like you to meet one our oldest stars... and one of our newest.

I'm sure you recognize the guy on the left. He's somebody we bump into all the time on the Disney backlot. Or, to be more exact, he's always bumping into us. Of course, I'm talking about that happy bumbler, Goofy.

This is a big year for Goof. He's 60 years old, and as accident-prone as ever. To celebrate the big event, Goof's starring in his own show, called Goof Troop, which airs Monday nights and weekend mornings on The Disney Channel, starting April 20.

Co-starring on the show will be Goofy's son, Max, who will be appearing in front of the cameras for the first time.

Of course, one part of growing up is to experience those occasional moments when you feel hopelessly embarrassed by something your parents do. But when your Dad is Goofy, those embarrassing moments aren't so "occasional." They happen all the time.

Nevertheless, Max loves his oddball father very much and, by the end of every show, you'll find that they've managed to work out their assorted mishaps and misunderstandings.

Goofy and Max live in the suburbs, next door to another venerable Disney character, Pete. Pete appeared in the first Mickey Mouse cartoon, Steamboat Willie, as the bullying pilot of the boat Mickey worked on. Since then, he's appeared in numerous Disney films, always as the bad guy.

Well, Pete's mellowed—just a little—over time. Needless to say, well-meaning Goofy always finds a way to infuriate short-fused Pete.

As you can see, Goofy, Max and I are going over one of the scripts for the show. We hope you'll be joining us every Monday night—and weekend mornings—so you, too, can have a Goofy time right here on The Disney Channel

ARCHIVES

ARCHIVIST DAVE SMITH ON DISNEY FACTS, FIGURES, HISTORY & TRIVIA

Disney Facts OUR READERS WANT TO KNOW

Why was Captain Hook shown in a recent Disney Channel Magazine in two pictures, each with his hook replacing a different hand? Which is correct? I know James Barrie used the right hand in his book.

—R.N., Livermore, CA

I figured that the best way to get an answer to your interesting question was to go to the source, Frank Thomas, who animated the character. Frank explained that there were many meetings of the animation staff trying to decide how to handle the hook. While they realized that Barrie had the hook on the right, they saw problems with that in animation. They wanted Hook to be able to make gestures, to write, and to perform other actions that are simpler to do with the right hand. So they made the decision to place the hook on the left. This made their animation of the character a lot easier. Regarding the inconsistency in the published photos, sometimes in page layout a photo is "flopped" for aesthetic reasons. In this case it led to an inadvertent error, putting Hook's hook on his right arm—which was wrong.

Hook's hook is now restored to his left hand—which raises another question for the animators: How does Hook draw his impressive rapier from its scabbard?

Could you tell me who put together the wonderful montage of movie clips that is shown at the conclusion of The Great Movie Ride at the Disney-MGM Studios?

—T.R., Marlboro, NJ

That fantastic film compilation seen at the conclusion of The Great Movie Ride was created by Academy Award-winning filmmaker Chuck Workman.

A friend in England mentioned a Disney film to me called Hill's Angels, but I recognized it as one released over here under the title The North Avenue Irregulars. What's the reason for all the different titles?

—J.K., Tampa, FL

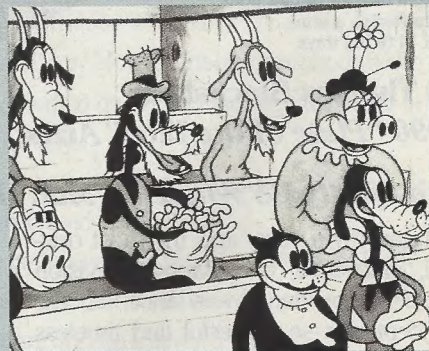

Sometimes marketing people abroad feel a different title would be stronger in their territory, so the title is changed. Besides the example you cited, I can cite a few others—Unidentified Flying Oddball became The Spaceman and King Arthur; The Littlest Horse Thieves became Escape from the Dark; Almost Angels became Born to Sing.

Readers with questions about Disney trivia can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Walt Disney Archives, 500 South Buena Vista Street, Burbank, CA 91521.

Looking Back

GOOFY TURNS 60: A LOOK AT HIS SHOW BUSINESS ROOTS

With 1992 being celebrated by The Walt Disney Company as "The Year of Goofy," let's take a look at Goofy's beginnings. The character, somewhat disguised, made his movie debut in 1932 with a bit part in a Mickey Mouse cartoon, sitting in a grandstand watching Mickey's Revue. What distinguished the character from those sitting around him was not so much his appearance but his raucous laugh. That laugh, supplied by Disney storyman, musician, and former circus clown Pinto Colvig, created such an impression on Walt Disney and his staff that the character soon began to be featured in other cartoons. Before long Goofy was part of the gang that included Mickey, Minnie, Pluto, Clarabelle Cow, and Horace Horsecollar. In the newspaper comic strips, this new character was given a name, Dippy Dawg; he soon evolved into a natural sidekick for Mickey Mouse. A 1938 book indicated the first change to Dippy's name, The Story of Dippy the Goof, and by 1939 the final change was made with the release of the cartoon Goofy and Wilbur. Don't miss The Roots of Goofy on March 1.

THE EURO DISNEY RESORT OPENS ITS GATES IN APRIL

On April 12, 44 months after ground was first broken, the Euro Disney Resort will open its gates. Europe's newest vacation mecca consists of the 29-attraction Euro Disneyland theme park, six dramatically themed hotels, a 27-hole golf course, a campground and Festival Disney, a complex of restaurants, shops, dinner shows and discotheques. Except for the tunnel now being built under the English Channel—which will link France and Great Britain—Euro Disney Resort may well be the largest building project in European history.

Euro Disneyland resembles its California and Florida cousins, though it comes with its own distinct European flavor. We'll be bringing you further reports on Euro Disneyland and its attractions in upcoming issues.

At Disneyland A SPECTACULAR NEW ATTRACTION

Coming in April to "The Happiest Place on Earth" is an attraction like no other—Fantasmic!, a spectacular extravaganza that literally lights fires along the Rivers of America in Frontierland. As night falls, Fantasmic! creates a thrilling world of illusion as Mickey Mouse appears at the tip of Tom Sawyer Island and uses his magical powers to create a world of fantasy characters—until such classic Disney villains as Ursula from The Little Mermaid and Maleficent from Sleeping Beauty threaten Mickey's fantasy world.

The story of Fantasmic! unfolds with an unprecedented display of state-of-the-art special effects. Lasers, fireworks, fiber optics and a variety of props appear magically throughout the presentation, interacting with a cast of 50 live performers. And the most unusual of all the technologies in the show are three giant "mist screens" formed of water—water of such density that film images can be projected upon them.

Fantasmic! is the biggest, most elaborate live presentation ever produced at a Disney theme park. It begins April 10 and will be presented every evening when Disneyland is open after dark—including three times nightly during Disneyland's summer season.

Walt Disney World Resort A DISNEYANA CONVENTION

This September—September 24-27 to be exact—Walt Disney World Resort is the site of a premiere event: the First Disneyana Convention. Not only is it the first convention to be held in a Disney theme park, it's the first such convention ever sponsored by The Walt Disney Company. A special package is being offered that includes four-day/three-night accommodations; a one-day, one-park passport; one night's admission to Pleasure Island; and special events including a look at Disney animation past, present and future, a Disneyana fair and auction, even a session with Disney archivist Dave Smith on "Treasures from the Archives." For fans of Disney and collectors of Disneyana, it's an event that's not to be missed. For more information write: Disneyana Convention, P.O. Box 10000, Lake Buena Vista, FL 32830-1000; or call (407) 580-7232.

Education & Entertainment THE WALT DISNEY COMPANY PRESENTS THE AMERICAN TEACHER AWARDS

It was some of the best of Hollywood meeting the best of American education.

And the honored teachers looked right at home on stage—after all, isn't that where they are every day in the classroom?—accepting their awards and speaking to the nation about their vision for education in America.

Enlightening, funny and inspiring, The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards saw some of America's top entertainers paying tribute to some people who have become celebrities in the world of teaching—three dozen of them, 12 of whom were chosen outstanding teachers in their fields and one of whom was named The Outstanding Teacher of 1991.

On the entertainment side, the program featured Jay Leno, Melanie Griffith, Don Johnson, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Jason Priestley, Ben Vereen, Betty White, Jane Seymour, Jon Voight, Tony Danza and Michelle Lee. There were touching and humorous film clips from moments in education-related movies and spectacular performances by dance, theater and band students. A short film profile was shown on each of the 36 teacher honorees.

Jay Leno started off the proceedings by introducing one of his high school history teachers to the audience. Later, he admonished the crowd: "I'm not up here for my health," and added that he had always wanted to say that in front of a group of teachers.

Arnold Schwarzenegger, who talked about his own school days and offered a personal pitch for physical fitness programs for every child, acknowledged, to a loud round of applause, that compared to being a teacher, "it's much easier just to be the Terminator."

Then there were the honored teachers themselves, in person and featured in videotaped vignettes filmed at their schools, vignettes which showcased their style, commitment, innovation, creativity and compassion in 12 different areas of education specialties: social studies, science, mathematics, early childhood education, physical education and health, vocational/technical education, elementary education, foreign language, coaching athletes, visual arts, English and performing arts.

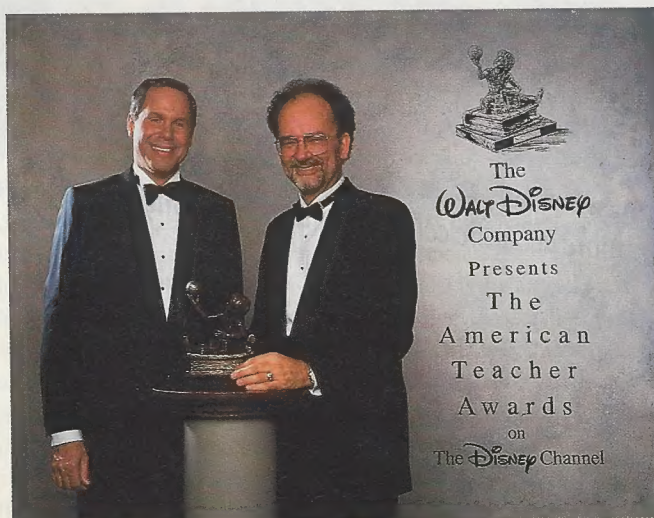

There were three nominees in each category, and one honoree was announced after all the candidates were introduced by video and in person. The outstanding teacher in each category saw $2,500 given directly to his or her school. A secret-ballot vote by all 36 honorees was held to choose which of the 12 category representatives would receive the Outstanding Teacher Award.

The American Teacher Awards was designed to honor the teaching profession and to showcase the hard and creative work that some of the best teachers in the nation are doing. It is The Walt Disney Company's hope that by honoring some teachers in a dramatic way, the entire profession will benefit, said Michael Eisner, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of The Walt Disney Company. The program was also funded in part by The Coca-Cola Company and Delta Air Lines.

The 36 teachers honored during the show were selected by a steering committee selected from the National Education Association, the American Federation of Teachers, the U.S. Senate's Subcommittee on Education, Arts and the Humanities, and other organizations with a focus on education. Their celebration started well before the award presentation itself, which was held on November 24 at the Pantages Theater in Hollywood. The month before, all the nominees met at Walt Disney World, where they participated in a homecoming parade and received a citizenship award from The Walt Disney Company.

With the help of 300 elementary school students, Bruce Lansky compiled this collection of the 80 funniest poems ever written for kids. And while Kids Pick the Funniest Poems (Meadowbrook Press; $13.00; distributed by Simon & Schuster) has all the great names—Ogden Nash and Dr. Seuss for example—you'll discover some gems by unknown writers. If you're giving this book to a young reader, here's a tip: read it yourself first.

Filled with ideas for art activities, craft projects, experiments, explorations and experiences, Earth Book for Kids (The Learning Works; $9.95) offers children a wide variety of ways to have fun while learning to care about the environment.

As the evening's grand finale to the awards ceremony, Eisner presented the Outstanding Teacher of 1991 award to Edward M. Schroeder, an English teacher at Coolidge Junior High School in Granite City, Illinois. The Outstanding Teacher award includes $50,000 in prize money, with $25,000 going to Schroeder, $25,000 to his school and an additional $10,000 going to his school district.

Schroeder's unique approach to education was evident from the moment he won the category award for Outstanding English Teacher. Arriving at the podium to claim his award, he started to sing, "Zip-a-Dee-Doo-Dah," expressing his excitement just as he often does in his class. Schroeder's theory of teaching is that learning ought to be interesting, and he puts the theory into practice by surprising students with anything from the unusual to the absurd. When boredom creeps into the classroom, Schroeder arranges to have the phone on the desk ring with a call from President Bush or Madonna, and students have come to class to find their desks replaced by rubber mats to encourage daydreaming.

Schroeder started college as a pre-dentistry student but switched to education when a German teacher inspired him to study by teaching polkas and songs after class. "The first time I stepped into my student teaching job, I knew I had made the right choice," said Schroeder in an interview with The Disney Channel Magazine after the awards ceremony. "I can only liken teaching to theater. You're in that room and the bell rings, and you're on stage."

Teaching for Schroeder is like pumping iron. "You pump yourself up and if you're standing in front of a class or walking around a classroom, the students get caught up in it."

Schroeder admitted that teaching has its discouraging moments. The hardest part about the job for him, he said, is coming to grips with the fact that he can't affect every student every year in the way he wants to. But he said teachers have to keep their work in perspective and be enthusiastic about what they are teaching.

Schroeder also challenged parents and others to get involved in education. "If I had a battle cry, it would be to urge every adult in the country to become actively involved in the schools in their community. And when something is wrong, fight the schools. When they can help make something right, help make it right. Don't sit back and let things happen. Take a part in the community school whether you have children or not, because it's costing you tax money," he urged.

Schroeder lauds Disney's American Teacher Awards program and says he feels all teachers will be better because of the nationwide recognition it produces. "There isn't one person here this weekend who is leaving without being turned on, renewed, rejuvenated, invigorated," he said. "We're proud of ourselves, we're proud of our profession. We're going to go back to our schools afire with the desire to teach."

Global News AIDING A SMALL WORLD

On March 29, The Magical World of Disney presents the U.S. television premiere of The Danny Kaye International Children's Awards for UNICEF. Founded in 1946 by the United Nations, UNICEF is the world's largest development agency devoted to safeguarding the lives and well-being of the world's children. For 45 years UNICEF has battled disease, malnutrition, and poverty around the globe.

In 1990, a World Summit for Children at the United Nations led 159 nations to sign a declaration and a plan for action to break down the walls of poverty, hunger, disease and illiteracy which imprison the potential of the world's children. Since that historic meeting, UNICEF has met one of the targets set by the summit: immunizing 80 percent of the world's children—before their first birthday—against the main killer diseases, a step that has saved at least three million lives.

But as UNICEF's report The State of the World's Children 1992 makes clear, the battle for the planet's young people is far from won. In the last decade of the 20th century, a time of an "emerging new world order," UNICEF in its report puts forward 10 specific propositions for that new world order, including halving child malnutrition, reducing child deaths by one-third, and ensuring that every child receives at least a basic education.

A little-known fact about UNICEF is that the agency is not only self-governing but self-dependent for its funds. The U.S. Committee for UNICEF, a non-profit organization based in New York, keeps Americans aware of UNICEF's work in developing countries. The oldest and largest of 32 national committees for UNICEF world-wide, the U.S. Committee also raises money for specific UNICEF-assisted projects through a dedicated network of volunteers, schools, churches, civic groups and businesses in this country. AN ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND ACTIVITY

When Lewis Carroll's legendary heroine tumbled down the Rabbit hole, she discovered a world in which everything was more than it seemed to be. When watching the new Disney Channel series Adventures in Wonderland, your child will find much more than hilarity, fantasy and fun! Each episode has been created to underscore concepts that enrich language development and provide the foundation for high-level speaking, reading, writing and thinking skills. You can help sharpen those skills by sharing the following activity with your child:

A New Season Premieres!

AVONLEA RETURNS WITH NEW EPISODES AND GREAT GUEST STARS

This year's Awards for Cable Excellence confirmed what Disney Channel subscribers already knew: Avonlea is the "Best Dramatic Series" on cable television. It is a series offering rich and satisfying dramatic stories that appeal to and touch all family members.

On Monday, March 2, Avonlea returns for its third season with all-new episodes. The season begins with "Sister of the Bride," in which Olivia's plans to marry Jasper disrupt the the entire King family—and send Aunt Hetty in a tizzy. Avonlea's tradition of great stories—and special guest stars—also continues in April as Christopher Lloyd (pictured below) of Back to the Future and Addams Family fame portrays a preposterously hammy actor who manages to take Aunt Hetty's place at the Avonlea School in "Facts and Fictions." And Christopher Reeve stars in "A Dark and Stormy Night," playing a nefarious confidence man.

NEW EPISODES BEGIN MARCH 2; EACH EPISODE PREMIERES MONDAY
AT 8:00 P.M. AND ENCORES SUNDAY AT 6:00 P.M.

The Magical World of Disney

OUR ANIMATION CELEBRATION

Goofy's 60th anniversary coincides with our 1992 "Animation Celebration" on The Magical World of Disney (Sundays at 7:00 p.m.). Join the party on March 1 with The Roots of Goofy, a 90-minute compilation which features some of the dippy dawg's greatest cartoons while tracing his family tree through the ages.

On April 5, it's time for Doug Fairbanks, Errol Flynn, and Kevin Costner to stand aside as The Magical World of Disney presents the 1973 animated classic Robin Hood. Of course, this Robin is a sly fox; his nemesis Prince John is a bumbling and cowardly lion (with the voice of Peter Ustinov!). And the Prince's partner is a slippery snake named Sir Hiss. Lovers of animation will also hail the encore engagement of The Brave Little Toaster on April 12.

Katharine Hepburn, plus Bob Hope and Danny Kaye.

And the films? Spencer Tracy and Elizabeth Taylor star in the original Father of the Bride on March 2. Tracy and Katharine Hepburn are married attorneys on opposing sides of a case in Adam's Rib on March 9. Bob Hope stars in My Favorite Blonde on March 16 and in The Ghost Breakers on March 23. And the laugh fest ends with Danny Kaye as The Kid from Brooklyn, playing a milkman turned prizefighter, on March 30.

Laughter turns to nail biting hysteria as that maestro of suspense, Alfred Hitchcock, takes center stage in April. The four films include his 1938 masterpiece The Lady Vanishes (April 6). Paul Newman is the American scientist who may—or may not—be defecting in Hitchcock's Cold War melodrama Torn Curtain (April 13). The Man Who Knew Too Much (April 20) is the film that brought Hitchcock to the attention of Hollywood's moguls. And rounding out the play bill is the 1940 Foreign Correspondent (April 27), with Joel McCrae tackling a spy ring.

The American Legacy CELEBRATING THE AMERICAN SPIRIT

The American Legacy (Tuesdays at 9:00 p.m.) celebrates the American experience with movies, specials, documentaries and miniseries. The offerings salute America's heroes, the magnificent vistas of the land itself, the American spirit, and of course the fight for freedom.

Meet an American hero on April 21. He's the man who invented the electric light, the record player and the movies. The program? American Originals: The Wizard—Thomas Alva Edison.

Also on The American Legacy, explore America's wonderlands with The Scenic Wonders of America: American West, which ranges from the Mississippi Basin to the Rockies (March 17), then take a thrilling Grand Canyon Mule Ride (April 14). Celebrate the American spirit with three great films. Lovers of the Great American West whose heroes have always been cowboys will be sure to enjoy The Great American Cowboy, Disney's Oscar-winning documentary on rodeo, airing March 3. On March 31, Katherine Beller stars in Mary White. On April 7, The Disney Channel Premiere Film Perfect Harmony returns. The recipient of two ACE Award nominations, it's the story of two boys whose love of music prevails over prejudice. The Baltimore Sun hailed Perfect Harmony as a "movie with heart and vision." Who better to lead the fight for freedom in Texas than Sam Elliott as Sam Houston in Gone to Texas (March 10). And Robert Urich, Tommy Lee Jones, and Meredith Salenger take part in the American Revolution in April Morning, airing April 28.

Sunday Night Showcase ROCK AND POP

Sunday Night Showcase (at 9:00 p.m.) swings to great music in March and April. On March 22 comes The Disney Channel premiere of Genesis: No Admittance, an hour of forceful rock.

The Magical World of Disney THE DANNY KAYE INTERNATIONAL CHILDREN'S AWARDS FOR UNICEF

To stand beside his reputation as a Hollywood legend, Danny Kaye left a legacy to the world as one of this century's great humanitarians. It's fitting that this entertainment gala for UNICEF should be dedicated in his name (for a story on UNICEF see page 10). Hosted by Audrey Hepburn and Roger Moore The International Children's Awards is an international talent show featuring some of the finest young performers from around the world. It's an evening of music and entertainment in many different styles and flavors. There's an American gospel choir from Washington, D.C., for example, as well as a superbly gifted young guitarist from Spain. And a roster of celebrity guests includes Natalie Cole singing her hit song "Unforgettable."

THE DANNY KAYE INTERNATIONAL CHILDREN'S AWARDS FROM UNICEF, A U.S. PREMIERE,
SUNDAY, MARCH 29 AT 7:00 P.M.

The unprecedented "studio special" takes you to "The Farm" in England as Phil Collins and his mates cut their recent album. Prefer classic American Pop? Try Judy Garland in Concert: Music from the Movies on April 19. It's a one-woman show featuring tunes from the golden age of musicals.

The Magical World of Disney ROCKET SCIENTISTS

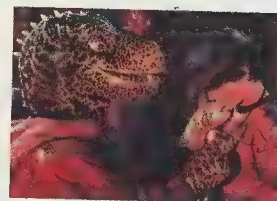

The adventures of Chip the Android continue in Not Quite Human II, airing April 19. Jay Underwood plays Chip; Alan Thicke is Doctor Carson, the creator of an android son. And this time out, Chip leaves high school for college where he falls for a coed with her own mechanical secret. (Don't miss the world television premiere of Still Not Quite Human, coming on The Disney Channel in June.)

Fred MacMurray gave one of the great comedic turns of his career in the classic Disney comedy The Absent-Minded Professor. In the course of inventing Flubber, MacMurray turns his love life topsy-turvy, outrages his college's president, and puts a scare in the Pentagon. The Absent-Minded Professor airs April 26.

The Family Movie Hour AMERICAN TALL TALES

Saturday evenings at 6:00 p.m. are devoted to our Family Movie Hour. And beginning in March, we're presenting Shelley Duvall's acclaimed and award-winning American Tall Tales. Spectacular guest stars bring these American legends to life. The fare ranges from Johnny Appleseed to Casey at the Bat and Davy Crockett. The roster of actors is a veritable Who's Who: Martin Short, Molly Ringwald, Rob

NOW PLAYING

Our Disney Channel Discovery for March is Lost in the Barrens II: Curse of the Viking Grave. It's a sequel to the Emmy-winning Lost in the Barrens. Lost in the Barrens II premieres March 13.

Stan and Ollie's greatest moments are captured in Laurel & Hardy: A Tribute to the Boys, premiering April 15 on Sunday Night Showcase. It's part of a year-long salute to great comedians. Coming in May, the first of three Jerry Lewis biographical specials.

Reiner, Elliott Gould, Carol Kane, Edward Asner, David Dukes, Shelley Duvall, Mac Davis and MacLean Stevenson. Shelley Duvall's Tall Tales begins March 7, on The Family Movie Hour.

Sunday Night Showcase GREAT NATURE DOCUMENTARIES

Two superb nature documentaries make special encore appearances on Sunday Night Showcase (at 9:00 p.m.) in March and April. On March 1, Anthony Hopkins narrates Antarctica: The Last Frontier. The special focuses on the fate of the world's seventh continent and the ecological hazards it faces as the 20th century draws to a close. And on April 26, Susan Sarandon hosts Primates: The Almost Human Animals. Five years in the making, Gerard Vienne's film—an official selection of the 1989 Cannes Film Festival—explores the world of apes, who are man's closest relatives in the animal kingdom.

U.S. Television Premiere DA

The Disney Channel is proud to present the U.S. television premiere of Da on March 17. Based on Hugh Leonard's acclaimed autobiographical play, Da stars Martin Sheen and, recreating his Tony-winning performance, Barnard Hughes. Sheen portrays a New York playwright who returns to Ireland for his foster father's funeral. The film received a 1988 Parent's Choice Award.

Tuesday Night Specials FOR YOUNG & OLD ALIKE

Tuesday Nights at 8:00 p.m. are reserved for family specials, programs selected to please all the members of the family.

Three particular highlights in March and April on Tuesday Night Specials: The Disney Channel premieres of The Return of Bunjee on March 17 (we aired The Amazing Bunjee Adventure in January and February) and Cyrano; an animated adaptation of Cyrano de Bergerac with Jose Ferrer as the long-nosed poet, which airs April 14; and don't miss an encore presentation of Rick Nelson: A Brother Remembers on March 31. Rick Nelson is the subject of Teen Idol, Travelin' Man, a biography from Hyperion Books, the new publishing division that's part of Walt Disney Publishing.

A New Animated Series Premieres

AT AGE 60, GOOFY MAKES HIS DEBUT IN AN ANIMATED SERIES

He's always been a dippy dawg, but with the premiere of Goof Troop you'll meet a Goofy for the '90s. It's a hilarious half-hour of animation and comedy as the Goof, now a single-parent family man, struggles to raise his son in suburbia. And while the old saw goes "like father, like son," Goofy's chip off the old block—named Max—desperately wants to be everything dear old Dad is not—which is cool, mainly. The results are misunderstandings and misadventures, complicated by their next door neighbor Pete. He's a snarling used-car salesman with an overweening ego and hair-trigger temper to match. Goof Troop is a hilarious half-hour, an animated sitcom that will rock the entire family with laughter.

GOOF TROOP PREMIERES MONDAY, APRIL 20,
AT 7:30 P.M.; AIRS MONDAYS AT 7:30 P.M.
AND WEEKEND MORNINGS AT 9:00 A.M.

Using Lewis Carroll's love for wordplay—plus music, fantasy, and fun—this new Disney Channel series makes kids “curiouser and curiouser” about the language they speak.

It's difficult to imagine an author having more fun with the English language than did Lewis Carroll when he wrote Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass. His zany characters often converse in logical illogic. Or is it illogical logic?

“Then you should say what you mean,” the March Hare went on.

“I do,” Alice hastily replied: “at least—at least I mean what I say—that's the same thing, you know.”

“Not the same thing a bit!” said the Hatter. “Why you might just as well say that ‘I see what I eat’ is the same thing as ‘I eat what I see!’”

Words bounce back and forth with translucent meaning and reasoning, get twisted and reshaped in a verbal cat's cradle. Words that look and sound funny spring up all over the place: “unbirthday,” and “muchness,” and “uglification.”

Adventures in Wonderland, The Disney Channel's new half-hour series for children aged three to eight, builds on this literary richness and linguistic fun. “We wanted to promote language skills,” says Peggy Christianson, The Disney Channel's vice president of creative affairs, “and there was no better place to start than with Lewis Carroll. His love of the English language, its idiosyncrasies and nuances, made it a natural evolution.”

But Adventures in Wonderland brings Lewis Carroll's whacked-out world and its inhabitants into the 1990s. And adds music to it—four songs in each half-hour segment—rap, rock, country, calypso and rhythm and blues. The White Rabbit zips around on roller-blades running errands for the Red Queen, and with his cellular phone, frequently misunderstands her majesty, a rock-gospel-singing ruler, played by Armelia

McQueen. Also tripping over the quirks of the English language, as well as over their own feet (there's lots of uproarious slapstick), are the March Hare and the Mad Hatter, best friends. Their hip friends, brothers Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum, have their own communication problems, but not when they break into hip-hop or hip-hop into break and rap.

As a change of pace, the sage Caterpillar sits in solitary splendor among the leafy bushes he munches. In glorious, sonorous tones he pontificates, telling stories which come alive on screen with the clay animation figures of Will Vinton Productions.

Casting was one of the most important challenges in putting together the series. “We needed talented actors, who could also sing and dance,” Christianson explains. “They also had to be right for the characters. When we finally found each one, we knew it, but it was a long and difficult search.” She remembers especially the first time she saw Patrick Richwood (the elevator operator in Pretty Woman) as the White Rabbit: “He was the White Rabbit, no question.”

The series is a multimedia production. In addition to the live action, which is truly alive—plenty of fast action and comedy—plus clay animation, there is a charming electronic character named Crystal. Crystal changes form, but she's always very colorful and very smart.

Education—and enhancing language skills—was always the specific

goal of Adventures in Wonderland. "We wanted to fill a need," says Stephen Fields, senior vice president of original programming at The Disney Channel. "We wanted to go beyond teaching letters, numbers, sounds and shapes. In fact, we wanted to introduce kids to how the English language really works. Adventures in Wonderland is intended to get kids excited about the English language."

The show's excitement comes from the humor which flows from the kinds of misunderstandings Lewis Carroll loved, such as idioms taken literally—"knock it off," "jump in the lake"; homonyms, words that sound alike but are spelled differently, creating confusion—"sense," "scents," "cents"; and compound words such as "eyesore," which makes an odd-looking image. In one episode poor Alice tries to explain to a few of her Wonderland friends the difference between "homework" and "housework," which becomes a perplexing task. It's also a show in which kids learn reasoning skills as well as vocabulary skills.

Two distinguished Los Angeles educators, who were instrumental in developing and overseeing the series, commented on the educational values that underlie and enrich the entertainment. "Each episode is a meaningful whole, and that's the way we learn," says Ruth Bunyan, an elementary District Administrator in Los Angeles, who has also written teacher-training programs for a literature-based, whole language approach to teaching English. "Flashing a word on the wall, in isolation, not embedded in meaning, doesn't put the word in a child's head. We learn in whole meaningful chunks. And we learn through stories, with a beginning, a middle, and an end."

Yvonne Chan, a school principal who is also a professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, and whose academic focus is languages (she speaks six), was delighted with the ways in which each episode makes language come alive. "The kids can see language, they can feel language. Meanings come across in a way that money can't buy in a school system." Another aspect of the series that pleased Chan was the different levels of understanding available for children of varying ages and abilities. Older children and adults will catch more of the puns and clever wordplay than will the younger ones, but three-year-olds will learn plenty while they're laughing.

Both educators recommend parents watching the series with their children. "Adults won't be bored," they each say, and parents can make the series a more active experience.

Most important, however, is the agreement among professionals in the field of education and professionals in the world of entertainment that the main reason the series works is that it is entertaining. "You've got to get children's attention first or it's a waste," says Peggy Christianson, who was also a teacher before she moved into television. "The first goal is to capture their imaginations. After that, we'd like to teach them a little something, too."

That Adventures in Wonderland will capture children's imaginations and teach them something, too, seems highly likely, according to Keith Geiger, President of the National Education Association. "Adventures in Wonderland will undoubtedly stir the interest and imagination of young viewers," Geiger says. "The programs are wholeheartedly entertaining as well as educationally sound. The characters in the series bring learning to life as they reinforce important language arts skills being taught in the classroom. The themes presented in these programs are right on target for early elementary students."

JAMES TAYLOR didn't really think the performances he and his band videotaped last fall in a converted barn on Martha's Vineyard would become any kind of television show. "It's just a beautiful spot," Taylor explains, "and we loved the way it felt after we did some rehearsals there in 1990. So we went back this year and decided it would be good to combine rehearsing for our small tour this fall with shooting a couple of videos." But after playing a blend of old and new material there for eight days, Taylor and his band wound up with something much stronger: the songs; some interview segments in which Taylor speaks with surprising openness and insight about the nature of his life and work; and a setting that provides a fitting context for Taylor's exceptionally intimate music.

Taylor was the first rock songwriter who specialized in chronicling himself. He says it's "very curious to be sort of a professional autobiographer and a celebrity who is himself for a living," but however odd it strikes him, this is the essence of what he's always done. Tall, shambling, balding, he'd hardly be a star otherwise, even with those bottomlessly blue eyes. There's a living room sensibility to a lot of Taylor's music, not at all what you expect in an age of MTV. Or, as he puts it, "I've been given the opportunity to make a number of videos in the last couple of years, but all that energy is a little thrown away on me." Yet with James Taylor: Going Home, he has very forcefully

"This was my idea," Taylor says. "One thing is that I think it's interesting to photograph people doing the things that they do. I felt more in a position of power and security working with the people I work with, instead of walking into somebody else's idea. This felt more like homeground."

It should have. In addition to working with longstanding band members like pianist Don Grolnick and singers Arnold McCullers and David Lasley, with whom he's been making music off and on for many years, he was operating in the Taylor clan's home-from-home. As Taylor says, "Most of my family either lives there or visits it a lot," and for a lot of James Taylor fans, the Vineyard and Cape Cod are—even more than the Carolina in his mind—the familiar landscape of his songs.

The atmosphere he creates is casual—no surprise, Taylor being a definitively laconic performer. From moment to moment, you really do have the sense of peering in at old friends engaged in a particularly joyful sort of labor. But in the rehearsals, Taylor manages to establish a surprising sense of command. Everyone and everything shifts with his mood, which is the mood of the music—bright with fond reminiscence on the mythical "Copperline" and "Frozen Man," slap-happy on "I've Got to Stop Thinkin' 'Bout That," convivial for "You've Got a Friend." After a while, you wouldn't be surprised to see that big golden retriever lounging beneath the

In Going Home, Taylor says that once you've sung a song "a thousand times... in rehearsal, your eyeballs roll." But when it comes time to sing "Fire and Rain," his first big hit and a chronicle of adolescent agony that he might be presumed to have outgrown, Taylor rivets even his bandmates, turning in a rendition pristine in its adult acceptance of those emotions. Taylor is so committed to the tune as he sings it—and, let's be fair, the lighting is so perfect—that his entire entourage is stilled, only to burst into applause as he finishes. In a way, this is as good as music video gets, for it takes an old standard and makes you realize something new about it: that you don't outgrow a song like this, you only return to it periodically with new perspectives.

"These albums seem different to me and they seem the same to me," Taylor says, and as he seamlessly threads together highlights of his two decades as a recording artist, that's an easy premise to accept. Taylor's work is all about a certain flow, the measured growth of a sensitive, intelligent, gifted, driven individual.

And even when his songs and his music look out at the world most vividly, they've got a private, homespun story to tell. □ music table get up and walk through the shot. Yet the only time there's a false start, on "Frozen Man" (from Taylor's new album, New Moon Shine, no less), bandleader Don Grolnick books James for deliberately creating an ad lib situation for the camera, and the bossman just laughs, never denies it.

A young boy is lying on his stomach on a bed with a blue blanket, reading a Disney Adventures magazine. He is wearing a white t-shirt and blue pants. His legs are sticking up in the air. The room is decorated with a jungle theme. On the wall, there is a large zebra head on the left and a tiger head on the right. A parrot is perched on a branch to the left of the boy. A red lantern sits on a small wooden nightstand next to the bed, which also holds several books and a white cap. A large snake is coiled on the floor to the right of the bed. In the top right corner, there are two more Disney Adventures magazine covers. The top one features Fred Savage and has headlines like 'FRED SAVAGE HANDS YOU SPIES, CODES AND SECRETS STUFF' and 'AMAZING AND ATHLETIC'. The one below it features Rick Moranis and has headlines like 'COOL AERO RICK MORANIS' and 'FRED SAVAGE HANDS YOU SPIES, CODES AND SECRETS STUFF'.
